Beth, Ned, and Meg liked names
of things that had a short e,
just like their names did.

"Breakfast is my best meal," said Meg.

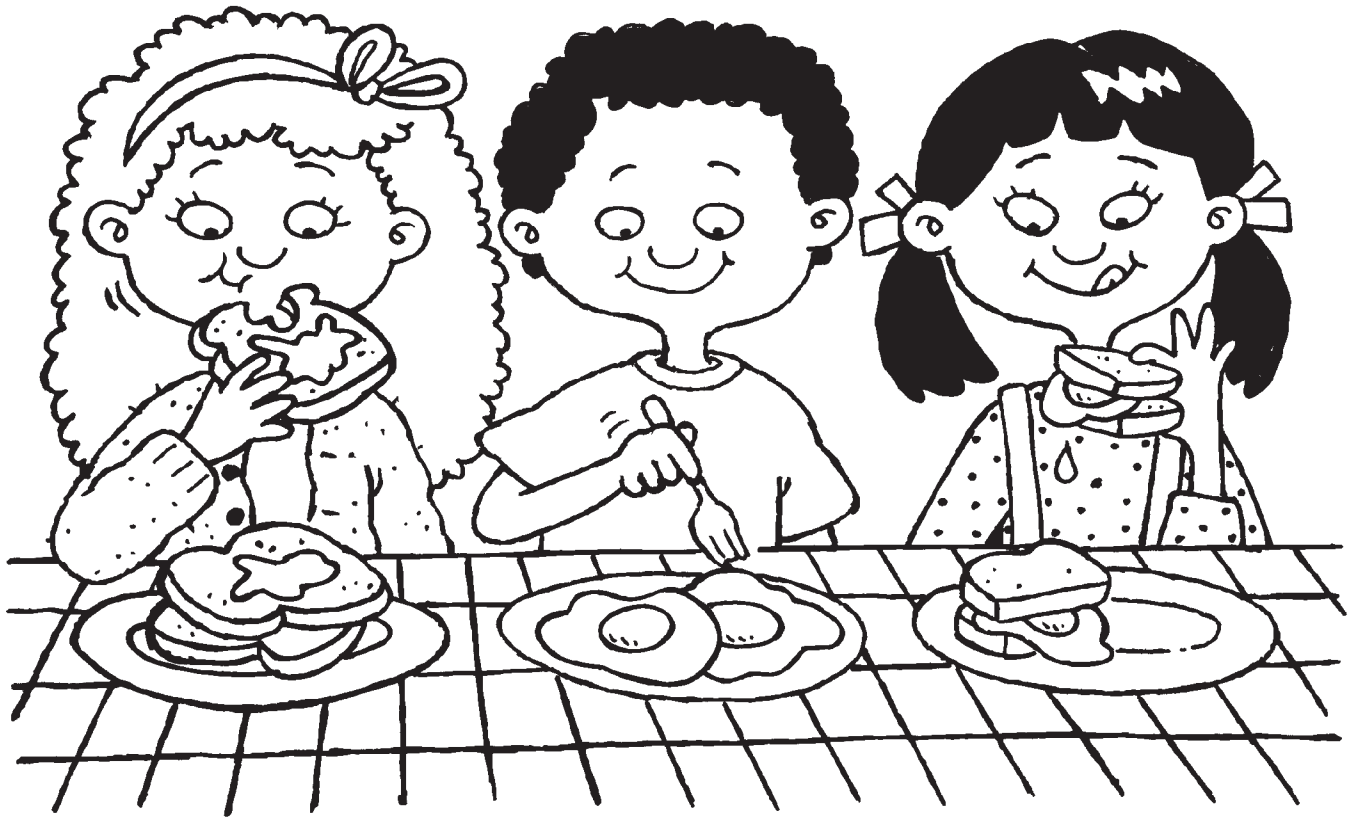

"Mine, too," said Ned.

"The word breakfast has a short e in it."

"I like to eat bread," said Beth.
"Bread is the best."
"You can't beat bread."
"I think eggs are the best," said Ned.
"The word eggs has a short e."
"I like bread and eggs."
They taste so good," said Meg.
Beth, Ned, and Meg ate bread and eggs for breakfast every day.

Meg had a green dress made of feathers.
"Feathers are so soft and feel fine," she said.
"And the word feathers has a short e."
Ned and Beth had pants made of leather.
"Leather feels so nice,"
they said.
"And the word leather has a short e."

Beth, Ned, and Meg put on their sweaters on Sunday.
"Sunday is sweater day," they all said.
"And the word sweater has a short e."

"I like to put a sweater over my green feather dress," said Meg.

"We like sweaters with our leather pants," said Ned and Beth.

Ned liked to play checkers and chess.
He liked to play these games in a tent
when the weather was wet.
"Checkers and chess have short e in their names," he said.

Meg liked hens with red heads and yellow legs.
Beth liked to put heavy gems
on her fingers.
She liked to sit in a nest in a tree
while she looked at her rings.

Beth, Ned, and Meg like to read.
They read short e words like thread,
dread, breath, and bled.
"Short e words are the best," they said.
"Hooray for short e words!"
